

Memorable, Affordable Alternative for Grieving Pet Owners Is Offered By Angels Wings Funeral Flights, Inc.

Funeral flight achieves beautiful tribute and sense of closure at a fraction of pet cemetery cost.

TEMPE, AZ, December 15: Angels Wings Funeral Flights, Inc. offers compassionate, skilled help with one of the most challenging questions confronted when a faithful animal companion dies: where will be the beloved pet's final resting place? For increasing numbers of grieving pet owners, an aerial release of cremated remains is the answer.

Pilot Jackie Tatelbaum, founder of Angels Wings Funeral Flights, knows what it's like. Heartbroken when her beloved terrier Bessie died, she felt she had no alternative to sending Bessie's body away for cremation and disposal: a cemetery plot was just too expensive. Later, when she learned that private cremation would have been possible, allowing a return to her of the ashes, she knew what she would have wanted, to lovingly release Bessie's ashes into the sky.

Tatelbaum explains "Since many of us have enjoyed our happiest days outdoors with our animal companion, what could be a more fitting way to say farewell? A release of ashes into the sky is symbolic of our desire to set our pet free for its final journey. Afterwards, each beautiful sunset can be seen as a living memorial to our departed friend." With that in mind, she has made it her personal mission to guide grieving pet owners from that lonely place of sorrow towards a beautiful memory and sense of closure.

Grief counselor Marty Tousley of Hospice of the Valley observes "Our pets become loved ones to us, like a close friend or family member. Yet when a pet's life ends, there are very few generally accepted rituals to comfort and acknowledge our intense grief and help us express and work through our loss. Angels Wings Funeral Flights can fill that need, with an exceptional level of understanding and skill."

With Angels Wings Funeral Flights, ashes are gently released by the caring hands of the pilot in the location of your choice. All pilots are Commercial Pilots with Instrument Ratings, and flights are made in accordance with FAA and other regulations. Basic funeral flights start at just $400 for destinations within 50 nautical miles round trip.
